The Challenge

Nearly two decades ago, Joshua Kobe was confronted with an overwhelmingly heart-wrenching predicament that tested his very core. It was a crisis born of the most profound and petrifying kind — a health crisis involving his infant son. His child was diagnosed with a rare and devastating form of cancer, an unimaginable situation that put the Kobe family into despair.

In these darkest moments, the Kobe's were presented with a choice that no parent should ever have to make. Their insurance coverage, while offering some support, needed to be more extensive in the face of the complex treatments and medical bills. Joshua Kobe and his family found themselves standing at a scary and unknown crossroad.

The decision transcended mere financial calculations; it was a test of courage, love and a family's devotion to their child. Joshua Kobe and his family chose the journey of incredible sacrifice and unwavering determination. This act of profound love, sacrificing everything and altering the course of their life in ways he could never have foreseen. Undeterred by adversity, Kobe went all in to save his son. This was the only path imaginable regardless of what the outcome would be.

The Solution

The treatment was a triumph and his son was thriving! It was a blessing and the result of unwavering determination. However, it came with huge financial risks, and pushed Kobe into bankruptcy, causing significant financial challenges for his family.

But, Kobe's remarkable journey had taught him not to shy away from risks and instilled in him the courage to invest in himself. He worked tirelessly, driven by a clear purpose, and he endured. As time passed, he successfully rebuilt his life and his credit score, which eventually climbed above 800.

This mindset would prove invaluable when he crossed paths with Peter J. Burns III, the visionary founder of Burns Funding. One meeting with Peter, learning about his remarkable success, Kobe was intrigued. He took Peter's business card and delved into the world of Burns Funding, a company dedicated to helping entrepreneurs and investors secure private capital by leveraging their credit scores.

After a few months of research, Kobe decided to reach out. Burns Funding's unique model allowed him to secure capital based on his creditworthiness, which he intended to invest in various passive income opportunities vetted by Burns Funding.

"He has an amazing story to tell, one that is inspirational to all.

On one path, they could place their trust solely in the insurance payments, filled with uncertainty and the real possibility of losing their newborn son. On the other path a courageous and incredibly selfless choice – to take on the monumental financial burden themselves, taking on the risk of financial ruin in exchange for the potential to save their child."
